Call for participants and trainers

WHAT:

"YES (Youth Energizing Societies) - from simulation to action" is a training activity on prevention of human trafficking gathering 40 young people and youth workers from 5 partner countries from South East Europe and the EU who are active in their communities aiming to provide them with competencies in order to encourage dialogue and mutual understanding according to the ideas of solidarity and respect for human rights through non formal education and raising awareness of prevention of human trafficking in European context. This 6-day camp combines various learning methods such as case studies, panel discussions, trainings and workshops and exchange of practice. During the camp, participants will develop an Action plan 2014-2018 recognizing measures to support prevention of human trafficking in Europe and work on poster design that will be developed and later used by their organizations in a campaign towards raising awareness of this current problem. The project recognizes youth as energizers of societies, involves them in the simulation (camp) and action (community activities) process and therefore makes them active European citizens.
